ABSTRACT

Prepared for education students, teachers, and special librarians to supplement the resources of well-known education libraries in the New York Metropolitan Area, this directory has been compiled as a reference tool for those who find the usual sources do not have the needed specialized resources. Because the 39 private and tax-supported libraries listed do not specialize in education, they may be overlooked. The listings include library name, address and phone, access policies, subject strengths, and services. The libraries were chosen from a questionnaire and may or may not be members of METRO; however METRO compilers have visited most of them at least one time. Since many are not designed to serve the general public, a preliminary phone call is suggested prior to visiting. (Author/RAA)

INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this directory is to guide education students, educators and others interested in education to libraries which have information they need. It has been compiled as a reference tool for librarians who find that the usual public and college libraries do not have the specialized resources needed by some library users.

The aim of this directory is to acquaint librarians and their users in the field of education with a variety of private and tax-supported libraries available in the New York metropolitan area. These specialized libraries form a unique resource for educators.

Most, but not all, of the libraries listed are not members of METRO. However, they are all located in the New York metropolitan area. The libraries listed were chosen by members of the METRO Education and Psychology Librarians Discussion Group. No attempt at a scientific selection procedure was made. Questionnaires were sent to the libraries identified for possible inclusion in the directory. Most of the libraries listed were visited by at least one member of the group.

The libraries listed include large and small facilities. However, since many of them are not designed to serve the general public, it is wise to call first before referring a visitor.

SUBJECT STRENGTHS: Film reference library (with materials on television and other non-print media). Our emphasis is on the documentary and educational film, film as art, animation and independent film in general. We have approximately 1,300 books on film and related subjects; 147 magazines and newsletters on film, t. v., A-V, education, children and libraries. Our greatest and most unique source of information is our files: a title file of films (going back 20 years; mostly educational films; with credits, descriptions, and in most cases evaluations); a subject file; a festivals file; a library administration file; a filmmakers file; a vertical file (including information on grants, distribution, showcases, film activities in the metropolitan area and in major film centers around the country).

SERVICES AVAILABLE: We provide a number of services for our members, including compiling filmographies on different subjects. We will also answer telephone reference calls, letters requesting information. We will answer non-members requests by telephone and mail, if they are not too extensive or time-consuming. Library users are offered as much assistance as they need. Our most typical question is who is distributing a certain film, or what is the address of a certain distributor.
In September, we published Film Library Administration: Selected Bibliography. It is a bibliography of current or noteworthy reference books for the film librarian, with critical annotations. We plan to update this every year. It is available for a $1.00 from EFLA.
